1. Resolutions requiring action by the General Assembly

7/1. International Year of Shelter for the Homeless

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling its resolution 6/1 of 5 May 1983 and General Assembly resolution 38/168 of 19 December 1983 on the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

Noting with special appreciation that, since the sixth session of the Commission over one hundred countries have designated official national focal points for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

Noting also that urgent action is needed for national programmes in accordance with the programme for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless and the recommendations for national action adopted by Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, a/

Recognizing that the initiative regarding national action should be taken by countries themselves,

Convinced that national assessments of resources and needs, as described in the annex to General Assembly resolution 38/168, are an essential means to develop strategies and programmes for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

Convinced also that, in the implementation of strategies, programmes and projects for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, all possible means of co-operation and bilateral arrangements between and among international agencies, governmental and non-governmental organizations should be used to the full,

12. Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption at its thirty-ninth session of the following draft resolution:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolutions 37/221 of 20 December 1982 and 38/168 of 19 December 1983 on the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

"Noting with appreciation that over one hundred countries have established national focal points for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless and that national programmes and projects are already underway in many countries,
"Noting also that most of the voluntary contributions pledged to date have been pledged by developing countries and that further voluntary contributions are needed in order to carry out effectively the overall plans c/ endorsed by the General Assembly for the activities before and during the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

"1. Expresses its appreciation to those Governments which have already made voluntary contributions and pledges to the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless;

"3. Requests specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, including the regional commissions, to review their policies and programmes with a view to incorporating therein and augmenting activities which serve the objectives of the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless;

"4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on progress achieved in the implementation of the approved programme of measures and activities to be undertaken before and during the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless;

"5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda for its fortieth session an item entitled 'International Year of Shelter for the Homeless'."

Recalling its resolution 6/7 of 5 May 1983, entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and Shelter-Afrique", Having noted the various steps of an organization nature which have been taken to enable Shelter-Afrique to commence operations at its headquarters at Nairobi, Kenya,

Noting with appreciation the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) on Shelter-Afrique h/ and the fact that a draft memorandum of understanding identifying specific areas of co-operation and the modalities of such co-operation was prepared by the Centre and submitted to Shelter-Afrique for consideration,

1. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to continue to provide assistance, within existing resources, to Shelter-Afrique and to report to the Commission on Human Settlements at its eighth session on the progress made in finalizing the draft memorandum of understanding;

2. Further requests the Executive Director to submit to the Commission at its eighth session a report on the specific nature of technical assistance and support rendered to Shelter-Afrique.

7/7. Special theme for the Commission at its ninth session

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Having considered the proposals put forward in the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) on themes for the Commission at future sessions, i/h/ HS/C/6/2/Add.2.

i/ HS/C/7/10/Add.1.
1. Decides that the special theme for the Commission on Human Settlements at its ninth session should be "The role of community participation in human settlement work;"

2. Invites the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to submit to it at its eighth session an outline on the theme paper, giving the Commission further opportunity to provide guidance as to the way the theme should be developed.

7/8. Activities for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless in the occupied Palestinian territories

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Considering the difficult living conditions imposed on the Palestinian people in the occupied territories,

Considering the refusal of the occupying authorities to carry out any housing programme for the Palestinian population and the deliberate intention of those authorities illegally to establish human settlements rejected by the General Assembly of the United Nations as benefiting persons other than the legitimate owners of the land,

Given the difficulties created by the occupying authorities with a view to preventing the Palestinian population from building housing with its own resources,

1. Recommends that the Executive Director of the United Nations Commission on Human Settlements (Habitat) consider the possibility, on the occasion of the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, of carrying out, under the supervision of the United Nations and in co-operation with specialized bodies, a housing programme for the Palestinian population in the occupied territories;

2. Requests the Executive Director to submit a study on the subject to the Commission at its eighth session.

7/9. A Systematic and comprehensive approach to information for human settlements

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Having considered the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), entitled "A systematic and comprehensive approach to information for human settlements". 1/

1/ HS/C/7/4.
Taking note of the report "A systematic and comprehensive approach to information and communication as a part of overall human settlements work" submitted by the Expert Group Meeting on Information and Communication, held at The Hague, the Netherlands, from 5 to 9 September 1983,

Noting that the two reports referred to above complement each other - the Executive Director's report concentrating more on information and the one by the Expert Group focusing more on communication,

Aware of the important role information and communication play in the formulation and execution of human settlements policies, programmes and projects,

Aware also of the usefulness of establishing, at policy, programme and project levels, an information and communication unit with the following tasks:

(a) To contribute to the preparation and implementation of policies and programmes,

(b) To give information, by as simple a means as possible, to the various interested parties and persons in human settlements activities,

(c) To open a communication channel for collaborative action between people and governmental agencies,

(d) To offer a professional vehicle for the transfer of people's views and wishes to the decision-making level,

Taking into account the comments and views of delegates to the Commission on Human Settlements at its seventh session,

Noting with satisfaction the efforts and achievements of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) with regard to information for human settlements,

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centres for Human Settlements (Habitat);

2. Takes note of the report of the Expert Group Meeting on Information and Communication;

3. Urges Governments to formulate information and communication policies and plans in the field of human settlements in order to promote full participation in the exchange of information at various levels, in particular at the project level;

4. Also urges Governments to establish human settlements communication and information units, including documentation centres, within human settlements ministries, planning agencies and project organizations;

5. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to promote within existing budgetary resources - inter alia, through the regional information offices - assistance to Governments and non-governmental organizations in the formulation of a communication and information policy in the field of human settlements and to advise on the establishment of special units for that purpose;
6. Suggests that the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) act as a focal point in the gathering and documentation of information on human settlements;

7. Further requests the Executive Director to strengthen collaboration with relevant organizations within and outside the United Nations system with a view to avoiding duplication and to developing prototype schemes for data and document collection, and also for the sake of preserving the wealth of existing scientific and technical literature;

8. Requests the Executive Director to report to the Commission at its ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

7/10. A new approach to the financing of housing within the framework of the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling its resolution 5/4 of 7 May 1982 and General Assembly resolution 37/221 of 20 December 1982 on the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,

Having considered the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), which contains specific proposals concerning the targets and overall plans adopted for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, and priorities for action at the national and international levels,

Recalling the proximity of the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, a year full of hope for the most disadvantaged populations,

Invites the developed countries, in co-operation with developing countries as well as national and international financial agencies, to consider, until 1987, within the framework of their development projects, providing for or increasing the percentage of financing for shelter and allied services for the most disadvantaged, at favourable financial terms.

7/12. Report on financial and other assistance provided to and among developing countries

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Having considered the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) on financial and other assistance provided to and among developing countries for human settlements, k/

Noting with appreciation the efforts made to supply the Commission with information in that field,

Considering that comprehensive and analytical information on human settlement assistance to and among the developing countries is essential for the fulfilment of the task of the Commission,

Considering also that the information so far available to the Commission does not cover all the aspects necessary for the deliberations of the Commission,

1. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to continue his efforts to improve the information on financial and other assistance to and among developing countries, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 34/114 of 14 December 1979, by, inter alia:

   (a) Consulting with main donor and lending agencies on how best their activities can be reported;

   (b) Considering the posing of different types of questions to different agencies;

   (c) Expanding the part of the report dealing separately with each agency;

2. Calls upon major donor and lending agencies within and outside the United Nations system to give the Executive Director full support in complying with the present resolution;

k/ HS/C/7/6.
3. Further calls upon Governments to supply the Executive Director with their views on the policies followed for financial and other assistance to and among developing countries;

4. Also requests the Executive Director to provide, in his biennial report to the Commission on Human Settlements, an analytical overview of the views received from donor and lending agencies as well as from Governments.

12th plenary meeting
10 May 1984

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 32/162 of 19 December 1977 on institutional arrangements for international co-operation in the field of human settlements, and in particular section VI on concerted action and co-ordination,

Noting resolution II/1, section IV, of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme, specifically paragraphs 6 and 7,

Recognizing the desirability of the closest co-operation between the United Nations Environment Programme and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), Expressing satisfaction at the continuing co-operation between the Executive Director and secretariat of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and the United Nations Environment Programme,

Welcoming an intensification and, where possible, an increase in that co-operation,

Recalling its resolution 7/5 of 9 May 1984 on the question of a biennial cycle of sessions for the Commission,

1. Recognizes that changes in the practice of annual joint bureau meetings of the United Nations Environment Programme and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) involve institutional implications;

2. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), in preparing his report on the implications of adopting a biennial cycle of sessions, to assess the full implications of the discontinuation of the joint bureau meetings, as contained in decision II.1, section IV, of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme;

3. Decides to take up the question of continuation of joint bureau meetings at its eighth session, as an integral part of its discussion on the adoption of a biennial cycle of sessions;
4. Also requests the Executive Director to bring the present resolution to the attention of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme.

11th plenary meeting

10 May 1984

7/14. A systematic and comprehensive approach to training for human settlements

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling its resolution 5/16 of 7 May 1982, in which it requested the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to continue to give high priority to the information activities of the Centre in research, training and technical co-operation,

Recognizing the urgent need of developing countries for training as a basic prerequisite for the development of their human settlements,

Recognizing also that only speedy and concrete action on the part of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), other United Nations and international bodies, including the World Bank, and their member countries can have a meaningful impact on training,

Recognizing further that training of cadres should be firmly rooted in the social milieu in which human settlements programmes are undertaken,

Bearing in mind the following factors:

(a) That the lack of trained manpower is one of the major obstacles to the improvement of human settlements and the development process in the developing countries,

(b) That training for the improvement of human settlements is an essential instrument for development and should be seen as an integral part of the development process,

(c) That training of personnel for the improvement of human settlements must proceed within the framework of manpower planning and must be designed to respond to the needs of each country under prevailing economic, social and institutional opportunities and needs,

(d) That analysis of manpower requirements indicates the need for a range of skills based on a range of tasks and a hierarchy of responsibilities,

(e) That the hierarchy of job responsibilities and a comparable hierarchy of skills must reflect the social, economic and political development goals of a country and its region,

(f) That the training for that hierarchy of skills can only accomplish its mandate through multidisciplinary education for interdisciplinary professional practice and that each country has developed some training for certain levels of skills and responsibilities and should now complement those available human resources with further training and education, with the fullest support of donor countries and agencies,

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), entitled "A systematic and comprehensive approach to training for human settlements"; 1/

2. Takes note of the recommendations made in Sharing Responsibilities and Roles for Training in Planning and Development, a report prepared by a seminar of experts organized by the Centre for Human Settlements, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada, and submitted to the Commission on Human Settlements at its seventh session by the Government of Canada;

3. Requests the Executive Director to intensify his efforts in order to respond effectively to the increasing training needs of developing countries;

4. Also requests the Executive Director to take the following specific measures with a view to enhancing effective manpower development:

   (a) Continue work on the preparation of human settlements manpower development strategies and action plans to train human settlement project managers and other habitat personnel in essential specialities following an interdisciplinary approach in collaboration with interested United Nations member countries and, for that purpose, initiate co-operation with other international and national agencies;

   (b) Identify, for the Commission at its ninth session, in collaboration with interested United Nations member countries, specific training institutions that could be used as centres for human settlements to facilitate collective self-reliance in manpower development among developing countries and direct training to specific regional needs, and initiate new training institutions with explicit identification of the resource requirements;

   (c) Devise, as a matter of urgency and for the purpose of undertaking the steps outlined above, appropriate criteria for assessing manpower and training needs, after full consultation with Governments;

   (d) Establish an appropriate institutional capacity within existing resources within the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) for training, involving experts on the subject-matter from developing countries, for the purpose of responding effectively to the manpower needs of developing countries;

5. Also requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) to reflect, in the draft work programme and programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987, the urgent priority accorded to the proposed role of the Centre in training, which may entail adjustment in or deletion of other work programme responsibilities;

6. Further requests the Executive Director to promote within existing budgetary resources, mainly through existing institutions, the training of information and communication experts in human settlement matters and the training of policy makers, architects, planners, housing experts, project staff and community development staff in information and communication skills;

7. Recommends that Governments should focus increased attention on providing training, including vocational training, to a full-range of professionals and para-professionals and that, in so doing, they should reflect the diversity of skills and experience required for successfully building, improving and managing human settlements as well as assisting and supporting community efforts, including policies for human settlement training, methods for evaluation, training aids and specific workshops;

8. Urges Governments to assume their appropriate role in creating, expanding and financing training programmes and facilities within the framework of the proposals contained in the report of the Executive Director; 1/

9. Also urges Governments to provide an opportunity on the agenda of the Commission, on an annual basis, for discussion of training and, whenever possible, expert advisory services to the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) in formulating and carrying out its priority work in training;

10. Requests countries to pay special attention, when preparing and executing programmes and demonstration projects for the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, to creating, expanding and strengthening training programmes, including those on regional institutions, in order to meet the objectives of the Year;

11. Calls upon developed countries to support actively human settlements training in the developing countries by specifically including a training component in human settlements projects and, by providing more substantial resources to training through technical co-operation projects to support the strengthening and establishment of training centres;

12. Calls upon developing countries to increase priorities for human settlements manpower planning and training by, among other means, providing adequate resources for training, which is a prerequisite for self-reliance and long-term development, and by encouraging the establishment of training centres to facilitate multinational co-operation in manpower development;

13. Requests the Executive Director to report to the Commission at its ninth session on progress made in implementing the present resolution.

12th plenary meeting 10 May 1984

7/15. Dissemination among developing countries of information on the construction industry

The Commission on Human Settlements,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 38/168 of 19 December 1983, in which the Assembly welcomed and endorsed the overall plans for the activities before, during and after the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless,
Taking note of the Secretary-General's message to the Commission at its seventh session, in which attention was drawn to the appropriateness of holding the International Year in the context of the current world economic crisis, which is affecting all countries in general and developing countries in particular,

Taking note also of the report submitted by the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), which describes the preparations for the International Year and calls upon Governments to continue efforts, through projects and financial contributions, to ensure the successful celebration of the International Year,

Welcoming the forthcoming consultation on the building materials industry to be arranged by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization with the co-sponsorship of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat),

Having noted the interesting and useful debate held by the Commission at its seventh session in connection with item 6 of its agenda, entitled "International Year of Shelter for the Homeless",

Noting with appreciation the information on simple building methods which the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements has already published,

Convinced of the existence in developing countries of construction technologies capable of increasing and improving housing output through simple building methods, making use of local building materials in ways suitable for self-help builders and local craftsmen,

Convinced that those technologies should be disseminated among the developing countries as appropriate means of dealing with technical, social, economic and other aspects of the housing problem,

Considering that, among the efforts being made for the celebration of the International Year, a better knowledge of opportunities for technical co-operation among developing countries represents an additional means in the search for opportunities to enable developing countries to apply construction techniques appropriate to their environment and economy,

1. Invites the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), working in co-operation with the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, to disseminate among developing countries information on construction technologies existing in those countries and, through an analysis of the relevant national development plans, to highlight opportunities for horizontal co-operation, allowing the application of construction programmes technically appropriate to the environment and economic possibilities of the developing countries;

2. Calls upon the developing countries to increase exchanges of experience in the field of housing construction technology, either directly or through the co-operation referred to in paragraph 1 above;

m/ HS/C/7/5.
3. Also calls upon the developed countries and international organizations to collaborate in that undertaking in order to achieve effective co-operation among developing countries in tackling the difficult problem of housing, an opportunity so appropriately offered by the celebration of the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, in the conviction that that type of co-operation in no way replaces existing forms of co-operation between developed and developing countries, whether bilateral or multilateral.

ANNEX IV

Message from the Secretary-General to the Commission on Human Settlements at its seventh session

1. It gives me great pleasure to convey my greetings to the participants of the seventh session of the Commission on Human Settlements. I wish to express my deep appreciation to the Government and people of Gabon for the generous hospitality they have extended to the Commission.

2. It is most appropriate that this year the Commission is meeting in Africa. This should enable it to focus its attention anew on the grave threat to the livelihood and indeed the very lives of nearly 150 million inhabitants of this continent posed by an unprecedented combination of adverse circumstances, both natural and human-induced. During my recent tour of several African countries in the Sahel region, I was deeply distressed to observe the deterioration in the capacity of many countries to provide the basic needs of life for their citizens. Widespread drought and desertification, massive movement of displaced populations, severe food shortages bordering on famine, acute lack of adequate shelter, unhygienic water supplies, and generally weak economic and social infrastructures have exacerbated the already negative impact of the current international economic environment. This alarming situation, which has not only arrested the development process in many countries but is threatening to reverse it, poses a challenge to the international community. I would urge that it be kept in mind throughout your deliberations with the urgent aim of helping to enhance the capacity of the most seriously affected countries to cope with the difficult problems involved.

3. Despite the efforts of Governments over the past two decades, the seemingly modest goal of decent shelter for all has yet to be reached. Rapid population growth and lopsided population distribution, uncontrolled urbanization, deteriorating employment bases in rural areas, high cost of construction, inadequate capacity and resources for carrying out shelter programmes - all have combined to deny great masses of people the satisfaction of this most basic of human needs. Indeed, the shelter needs of most communities have increased rather than diminished. The Commission's recommendation to the General Assembly to designate 1987 as International Year of Shelter for the Homeless is, therefore, most timely. In 1987, the international community should be able to show actual improvements in the shelter and neighbourhoods of a significant proportion of the poor and the disadvantaged. These improvements must provide a basis for new policies and strategies whose implementation would assure benefits to all the world's homeless by the end of the century. This is a challenging task, no doubt, but one that must be accomplished.

4. The selection for specific review at this session of the twin issues of a systematic and comprehensive approach to training and information for human settlements is also a timely one. As Governments address themselves to the complex problems of how to accommodate the world's rapidly increasing population, the acquisition and proper utilization of information related to human settlements and the availability of trained manpower to plan and implement the myriad national programmes will assume a pivotal importance.

5. I wish you every success in your deliberations at this session.
ANNEX V

Summaries of statements

A. Welcoming address and inaugural message by the President of the Gabonese Republic, His Excellency El Hadj Omar Bongo, read by the Minister of State of Gabon, Mr. Minko

1. Mr. Minko welcomed all participants at the seventh session of the Commission on Human Settlements to Gabon, thanking them for having responded positively to the invitation of his Government.

2. He reiterated his Government's support for the work of the Commission, revealing his Government's efforts in implementing the national plan of action in the field of human settlements. He reminded delegations of the intrinsic link between human settlements development and the fulfilment of basic human needs, pointing to the fact that human settlements activities were not limited to the provision of housing for the poor but included adequate co-ordination of efforts in both the public and private sectors to provide clean drinking water, fuel, food, medical services, education, culture, sports and leisure.

3. In view of the forthcoming International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, he considered it most appropriate that the Commission on Human Settlements had chosen to discuss the themes of training and information in depth during the current session, since it provided an opportunity to reflect on the fundamental problems of the use of knowledge, the exchange of experiences, the dissemination of information, and ways and means to create and manage human settlements.

4. Expressing the hope and expectation that it would be a successful one, Mr. Minko declared the seventh session of the Commission on Human Settlements open.

B. Address by the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat)

1. The Executive Director observed that there were certain benefits deriving from holding the sessions of the Commission in a variety of venues, bringing delegations to different parts of the world where they could see first-hand some of the problems and solutions they discuss at the sessions. Meeting in Libreville was especially appropriate, since Gabon had always been one of the strongest and most consistent supporters of the work of the United Nations in the field of human settlements.

2. The Executive Director reminded the participants that, in his opening statement in the previous year, he had suggested that the current economic problems of developing countries should be seen as an opportunity to rethink investment goals and priorities, and to concentrate on development sectors with the highest local investment components. In the current year he would address another aspect of human settlements problems in times of economic constraints – namely, the heightened need for the greatest possible efficiency in the management and maintenance of settlements. Investments in infrastructure and structures had often been largely nullified by failures to operate the installations properly and by lack of measures to keep them in good condition and maximize their working life.
3. Building deterioration had reached proportions in the inner city areas of many developing countries whereby valuable assets had been lost, making the housing shortage even more serious than it needed to be. Poor management and neglect of water supply, sanitation and solid-waste collection systems caused increasing public expenditures, created health hazards and increased pollution of the environment. A consequence of the situation was likely to be an emigration of affluent households from affected areas and their replacement by low-income population, intensifying the segregation of different social groups which could lead to further deterioration of the physical environment.

4. The most important factor contributing to the situation was probably the priority given to new construction. Thus, the share of construction output devoted to the repair and maintenance of the existing stock of constructed facilities in developing countries ranged from 6 to 15 per cent, whereas in industrialized countries it ranged from 25 to 35 per cent. Another factor was the relative complexity of operational and maintenance activities, coupled with the problems of programming, managing and financing them. Furthermore, many operational and maintenance difficulties were caused by the inappropriate design of building and services, either by choosing the cheapest solutions or by adopting sophisticated - often imported - technologies.

5. In the majority of developing countries, systems of urban administration had largely followed Western models. Urban authorities managed public services but did not seem able to cope with many of the management issues which related directly to the needs of low-income groups. A promising line of approach for administrations would be to decentralize urban administration and to delegate responsibilities - including financial responsibility - to local communities.

6. For developing countries, the importance of rehabilitation and maintenance could not be overstressed. First of all, the cost of rehabilitating existing housing stock and infrastructure was considerably less than the cost of constructing new buildings and infrastructure. Secondly, loss of valuable housing for low-income groups could be prevented, relocations reduced and disruption of social fabric minimized. Thirdly, effective operation and maintenance of the existing settlement plant was a prerequisite for the efficient use of investments. Emphasis should be placed on revitalizing areas affected by progressive decay and neglect, to prevent further deterioration. Large-scale demolition in inner-city areas should be avoided. Building regulations, codes and standards should be reviewed and modified to ensure their appropriateness for promoting rehabilitation. Governments should stimulate the development of rehabilitation techniques in the construction industry and improve supplies of materials and components. New approaches to financing systems were needed for rehabilitation projects, preferably based on principles of cost recovery. Furthermore, it was crucial that maintenance be carried out on a continuing basis. All that, however, required immense financial resources. A barely adequate maintenance of roads in Africa, for example, was estimated to cost 0.7 per cent of GNP, whereas the present level of expenditure was 0.4 per cent.

7. A specific feature that must be encouraged was community participation. For instance, co-operation among all users was necessary for the effective operation of water supply and sanitation systems. Educational and training programmes should provide a basic understanding of how to use and maintain buildings and services. Direct community participation provided a great potential for the use of local labour in rehabilitation and repair works, with resulting employment, income generation and enhancement of skills.
8. In a period of economic constraints, the rational utilization of human settlements deserved much more attention than it had received in the past, but the development of new approaches to the management, operation, maintenance and rehabilitation of housing and infrastructure required political commitment on the part of national and local governments. Donors and international agencies should direct assistance programmes towards an emphasis on the effective use of existing capital stock in human settlements. The United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) had made a serious commitment to that cause and was devoting a part of its work programme to the effort. As regarded the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless, the programmes which countries were developing for the Year should give evidence of thoughtful consideration to maintenance and rehabilitation as essential elements of housing strategies.

9. In conclusion, the Executive Director stressed the necessity for professionals and experts to advance practical and innovative ideas for the optimal use of scarce resources to meet the fundamental need: shelter. The rehabilitation and maintenance of existing housing stock was one such practical idea that deserved the serious attention of Governments.

C. Statement by the Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme

1. The Executive Director drew attention to a report on strife-ridden Central American countries, published by the United States Agency for International Development. The report concluded that the fundamental causes of the problems in those countries were as much environmental as political, stemming from problems of resource distribution in overcrowded areas. The report, according to the Executive Director, was a sign that the environmental dimension to the political, social and economic problems facing nations alone and together was beginning to be taken into account.

2. The Executive Director recalled that, in addressing the Commission on Human Settlements in previous years, he had affirmed that the concern of UNEP for the environment did not stop at the city limits. He outlined UNEP views on the developing crisis in the city's internal and external environment. He said that later in the year he would be making a statement on why UNEP considered ecological collapse to be one of the root causes of the deterioration in the quality of life in towns and cities.

3. The Executive Director mentioned urbanization spreading over prime agricultural land, river pollution and acid rain as samples of the many ways conurbations - small, large and mega-sized - undermined the health and productivity of the environment beyond the city limits, such as poor use of the land, added to urbanization and other environmental problems within cities. The problems confronting large settlements, he said, were to a large extent a reflection of the state of the whole environment.

4. The Executive Director said that many nations, in effect, have been pursuing a development process which ignored, and thereby punished, the poor. In towns and rural areas they were being pushed to the margins of existence. He stressed the urgent need to use the environment to inject a new sense into the dialogue between and among developed and developing countries, a dialogue which would address poverty, which for a decade and more had been recognized as the main destroyer of the environment.

5. The Executive Director said that UNEP and UNCHS (Habitat) should do more to disseminate their appreciation for a co-ordinated approach - one that would turn their understanding of interrelationships into practical action. For that reason UNEP welcomed the choice of information and training as the two main themes for the seventh session of the Commission on Human Settlements. He mentioned the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless as an important vehicle for further cow-ordination, and assured delegations of the total commitment of UNEP to the aims of the Year in order to generate a new political will which would help the poor themselves.
